

A photograph of a waterfall cascading down dark, layered rock formations. The water is white and turbulent, creating a large plume of spray at the base. The rock is dark brown and black, with visible horizontal and vertical cracks and textures. The overall scene is dramatic and powerful.

Rushing Patience

Images of the Line between Water and Rock

*Boyd & Kathy Turner
Photography*

With the patience of eons and the endless pull of gravity, water rushes against rock

Caressing

Bumping

Falling

Raining

Impacting

Diverted but insistent

Around and over

Sometimes with a softer touch

Patiently pressing

Crashing

Major battles fought along lines of conflict

The power of both the Rock and the Water, wrestle for dominance

The Rock stands proud amid the foe

Yet the Water marks its foe deeper and deeper

Grinding

Scouring

Waiting to penetrate weakness

But the Rock resists

Co-opting non-combatants to soften the blows

Protruding

Impeding

Dividing

Persistent

Defiant

Rock unrelenting

Yet Turbulence

and constant Pressure

Push

Pummel

Sometimes wrapped in darkness

Sometimes clad in light

Always persevering with the certitude of dominance, the Water grinds away, leaving the Dust of a Rushing Patience

Images by Boyd & Kathy Turner

Text by Boyd Turner

see more of their photography at:
boydandkathyphotos.com